

www.interfaithconversation.ca

www.conversationinterreligieuse.ca

October 29, 2018

The Canadian Interfaith Conversation expresses deep grief with our Jewish brothers and sisters, and for all affected by the October 27 attack at the Tree of Life Congregation in Pittsburgh.

The Canadian Interfaith Conversation's Charter Vision states that we "desire to advocate for religion in a pluralistic society and in Canadian public life. We, the members of the Canadian Interfaith Conversation, want to promote harmony and religious insight among religions and religious communities in Canada, strengthen our society's moral foundations, and work for greater realization of the fundamental freedom of conscience and religion for the sake of the common good and an engaged citizenship."

Places of worship and gathering are vital to our pluralistic society, as is the freedom to worship without fear of violence.

Using violence to attempt to sow division and animosity will not shake our resolve to live in harmony and good will with each other. We have so much in common. We will continue to work together and stand up for each other. And so, standing in solidarity, partnership, and friendship with our Jewish brothers and sisters, and with people of all or no faith, we call for love and support of all peoples, and for renewed commitment to work together to build common ground for a flourishing society.

Aileen Van Ginkel, Co-chair
vanginkela@theefc.ca

Zul Kassamali, Co-chair
president.mcos@gmail.com

Geoffrey Cameron
gcameron@bahai.ca

Peter Noteboom
noteboom@councilofchurches.ca

Sandra Pallin
sandrapallin@ldschurch.org

Executive Committee